Biography and Social Media

July 2021

Kai Foster, born in Nashville, TN, started playing bass guitar at age 13. Once he started, he was hooked, and has been taking weekly lessons with Cedarstone Music School in Hendersonville, TN ever since. Early on he participated in their Performance Band Program, and is currently playing in the audition only group, Amplify.

Kai loves hard rock, metal and classic rock music but is really at home playing the blues.

While at Cedarstone, Kai has attended several music camps and is working hard to craft his chops on his bass guitar. He continues his weekly lessons, rehearses with Amplify and jams with a few of his local high school buddies doing rock and blues.

After meeting Matt Skoda, the drummer for the SKODA and who also attends Cedarstone, Kai was invited to join the band after departure of the former bass player.

Formed in January 2017, the group recently won the 2019 City of Brentwood school-age Battle of the Bands and has a standing monthly gig at the world-famous Lower Broadway Entertainment District in downtown Nashville. Since they formed, they have performed at various venues in Spring Hill, Columbia, Franklin, Brentwood, Nolensville and Nashville.

While Kai briefly left the band, he has returned to help the band achieve their goals of “making it” in the music business. Kai has worked hard to improve his playing and craft his own unique bass sound while locking in with the drummer of SKODA, Matt Skoda.

Today, Kai plays bass guitar with the band and is coming up to speed on the set list as well as performing in several gigs since joining the band.

When Kai is not playing music, he enjoys typical teenager activities such as hanging with his older brother, traveling with his family, playing football and baseball, and playing video games. But music is his first love and passion, and he plans to continue his development for years to come.
